

Sinclair should not be allowed to air "Stolen Honor" in the weeks before the election unless it also airs "Going Upriver", also in prime time.

"Stolen Honor" is a partisan screed for George W. Bush. Sinclair is making a huge political contribution to the Bush campaign by airing this film. Campaign laws are probably being violated. In any case, a major media conglomerate should not be allowed to meddle in U.S. elections in this fashion.

This is a prime example of the harm that comes from media consolidation. Free elections can only occur if access to the airwaves is approximately fair.
